"Only a few of the Old Boys left,"

"Full many a home has been bereft; They've passed along to the other shore.

Weary, and old, and tired.

Nor reveille nor bugle call

Grizzled and worn the few who remain-

Reckon we'd better get 'out o' the rain'-It's pretty near time WE were fired!"

The silent march, on toward the grave,

The heroes tread in broken ranks; They lived, they fought, some died to save A nation loved. Now closed their flanks!

No more shall rouse them to the fray.

Then scatter garlands o'er the tomb,

Salute the braves who rest at last, And let the light of love illume

Aged and withered-of hope bereft-

Only a few! Only a few!

Their lives, their valor and their past. Only a few of the "Old Boys" left.

Would that they might their strength renew!

-H. D. HANMORE.

They would not brook their country's fall;

They played their part, they had their day.

BROOKLYN TROOPS

GUESTS AT HARTFORD.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., May 30.—Principal among the many Memorial Day events in Connecticut was the visit of the Thirteenth Regiment of the National Guards of the First Regiment, Connecticut National Guards. The Brooklyn regiment arrived at Hartford about 6.30 A. M. and was entertained in an elaborate manner by the Connecticut regiment. All over the State there were sports of all kinds, parades and exercises in commemoration of the soldier and sailor dead, and in this city a handsome monument was unveiled in memory of Cornelius S. Bushnall, whose co-operation with John Ericsson, the inventor of the Monitor, caused the Monitor to be a reality.

The line of march was through Bedford avenue to Eastern Parkway and under the Soldiers and Sallors' Memorial Arch, where the reviewing stand was located.

And when they got to No. 119 West One Hundred and Sixteenth street and the mixteenth street and the go?

Did he?

And so it came to pass that when Edwin Underthill was leaving the bouse at No. 119 West One Hundred and Sixteenth street to-day he reached for his the average citizen had in him the capacity for such improvement.

The Man Who Counts.

It is just as true in beace now as it was forty-five years ago in war, that it is the character of the average man that must be the determining factor in achieving national success or going down to national disaster.
